ABOUT JORDAN SCOTT

Jordan Scott is an award-winning Chicago based artist and photographer. His mixed-media postage stamp artwork pays homage to his beliefs in the interconnectedness of the universe and is inspired by theories of the collective unconscious and Scott's 35 years of traditional martial arts training and teaching. He received a degree in Religious Studies from Indiana University and a degree from the Chicago Photography Academy.

PRESS

"With a love for using materials out of context, Scott produces mesmerizing canvases with the repetition of postage stamps. The intricate surfaces of these canvases present beautifully repetitive patterns from a distance, with a subtle surprise as the viewer approaches."

Charles Gniech, Curator/Critic/Educator

"I've carried Jordan Scott's work at the gallery for over a decade and have it in my personal collection. I'm fascinated by the individual journeys of each canceled stamp, as well as the exceptional care and concept that goes into creating each work. The enjoyment is limitless!"

Judy Saslow, Gallerist/Collector

"There is an investment of labor and an appreciation for the importance of a single unit in the creation of a greater whole. Each piece is for Mr. Scott a representation of a specific place or time in his life. When viewing these pieces together in an empty room they create their own atmosphere, their own weather. They are the visual evidence of how Mr. Scott organizes his personal experiences into patterns within patterns which gently unfold into even larger patterns. These works on canvas are a kind of evidence -they are moments of his life which have been filtered and made visible through a unique and musical kind of geometric language which is very much his own."

Pier Wright, Gallerist/Curator

"I like the formal qualities -the way the things come together; the redundancy, variations, striations, cancellations, colors, blocks...I'm engaged, immersed, seduced, second-guessing, drifting. The art does that. It's meditative. And...can you imagine where all these stamps have been?"

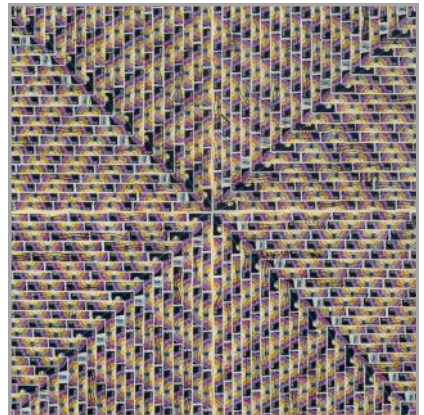

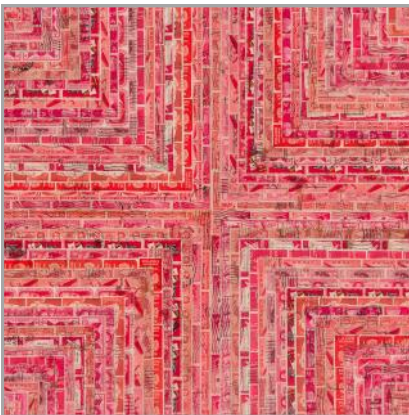

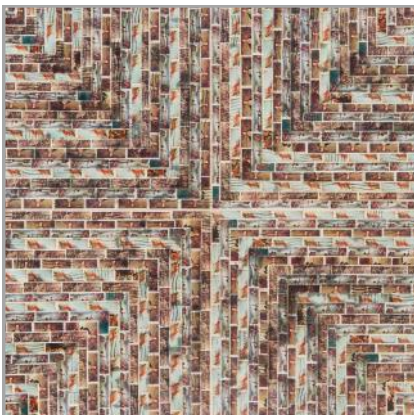

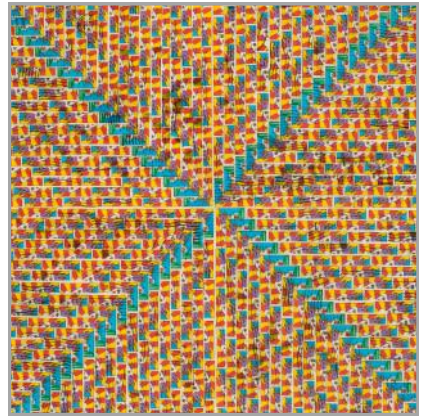

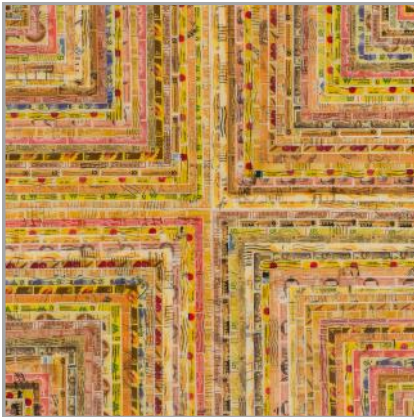

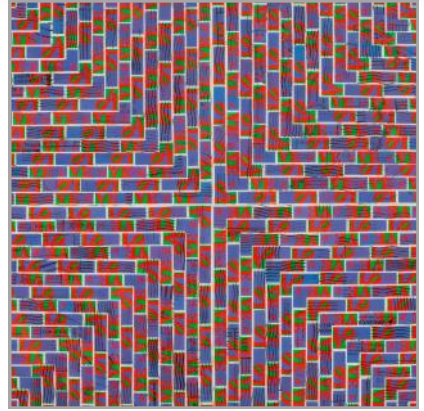

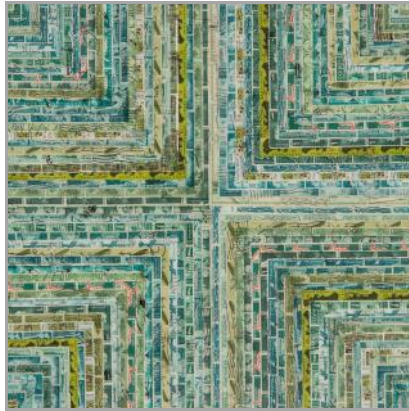

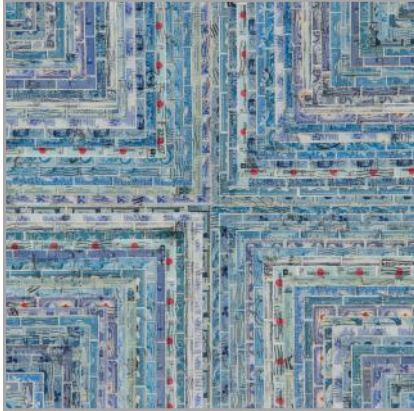

Paul Klein, Gallerist/Curator/Educator

"Standing in front of Jordan Scott's work, one encounters similar experience of overwhelming repetitive content. Instead of creating confusion and chaos, his works present a strangely harmonious impression of organization and structure that converts an otherwise chaotic world into an orderly one...In the process, the artist holds the role of mathematician, architect, and scientist by gathering, mapping, calculating, designing and constructing a micro universe within the context of a macro one."

Sergio Gomez, Gallerist/Curator/Educator

ARTIST STATEMENT

When I was young, my mother took me to a press proofing for a printed product advertisement. Looking into the glass loop, I was amazed to see that the seemingly solid colors were actually tiny individual dots. Sometime later, while visiting the Art Institute of Chicago, I encountered Georges Seurat's, A Sunday on LA Grande Jatte, and was introduced to the technique of pointillism.

I often use, or reuse, materials outside their normal context and that can be acquired in large quantities. This allows me freedom from overthinking the materials or the process, which is one at a time construction with great repetition. Currently, I use cancelled postage stamps as my primary medium.

Where did they originate? Who sent them? What letters did they carry? Each used and canceled postage stamp has a hidden history of its own. Each small stamp represents this unknown story and the expanded web that it was once connected to. My artwork touches on both the individual and the collective, on both the original sender of each correspondence and the society as a whole.

I am also influenced by theories of the collective unconscious and the interconnectedness of the universe and its correspondence to several schools of eastern thought and mysticism. The postage stamp pattern fields are my interpretation and reinvention of mandalas, or meditative microcosms. The resin, like liquid glass, helps to create and hold together this interconnectedness of the individual elements and at the same time heightens and helps to clarify and define their qualities. Like the ink dots I discovered under the loop, or Seurat's paint spots, the layered stamps create a blended whole connecting the hundreds or thousands of singular parts.
